Life Lessons for Leaders

Robertson McQuilkin, Former President, Columbia International University

Join us on Robertson McQuilkin's lifetime journey in seeking to bring all of ministry under the functional authority of Scripture, first in cross-cultural church starting and then in North American theological education. This life-time quest began with researching Scripture and church history, evaluating contemporary dynamic church movements, then personally testing and refining the principles in church and institutional settings, culminating in 2007 with the publication of Five Smooth Stones: Essential Principles for Biblical Ministry (Broadman, 2007).

Ministry Elements:

1. How to make Scripture the functional authority in ministry
2. Evaluating and planning for using all biblical purposes of the church
3. Connecting with the Spirit to energize the ministry
4. Enlisting every believer in full participation in God's redemptive program
5. Reviewing Satan's and Jesus' models of leadership, with unity and purity of the congregation or ministry as outcomes

Dr. J. Robertson McQuilkin is an international speaker and president emeritus of Columbia International University. He served as the third president of CIU from 1968 to 1990, resigning from the presidency to care for his wife, Muriel. He is the author of numerous articles and five books, the most recent being Five Smooth Stones (Broadman, 2007).
